Wide Talks Proposed For Ulster

Whitelaw Moves For Conciliation By Bernard Weinraub

LONDON, June 15 (NYT), William Whitelaw, Northern Ireland's administrator, announced today plans to hold a conference of the people of Northern Ireland" to resters peace to the province.

The object will be to emplie those who hold a wide variety of political opinions to exchange views to see what common ground can be found concerning the future of democratic institutions in Northern Ireland, Mr. Whitelaw told the House of Commons

"If my conversations show that there is also a widespread desire for a plebiacite on the border at an early date, the government would be very ready to arrange it, he said.

Mr. Whitelaw's speech followed two days of rapid political developments in Ulster. He has met with Protestanta, including former Prima Minister Brian Paulkner and representatives of the paramilitary Ulster Defense

Today, in a significant step, two key figures in the Social Democratic and Labor party, the political group largely represent-ing the Roman Catholic minority, met Mr. Whitelaw in London, It was the first time since the party withdrew from the Stormont Parliament last July that it had agreed formally to re-enter the Ukter political process and meet the British administrator.

The two representatives, John Hume of the Bogside in London-derry, and Paddy Devlin of the Falls Road area in Belfast, were chosen by the party because their constituents "have suffered most" in the continuing civil strife. The President made his comments at an extraordinary White House meeting with members of five congressional committees concerned with arms limitation

His statement was followed by an in-depth explanation of the documents by national security adviser Henry A. Kissinger. Questions from senators and represen-tatives to Mr. Kissinger showed general support for the agreements, but there were a number of questions indicating doubts about the need for new defense weapons systems proposed in the military budget.

The President's emphasis on maintaining defense levels and his opposition to "unilateral" defense cuts emphasized the differences between him and his potential rival, Sen, George S, Mc-Govern, D., S.D., who has called for a $30-billion reduction in detense spending.

He added that African delegations had presented a number of "meshed statements on colonialism and apartheid, which we have no objection to in principle. But they tend to obscure the strength of the declaration. I find this somewhat disturbing." The conference also decided to

DETROIT, June 15 (NYT) .-- A federal judge in Detroit yester-day issued the most sweeping school busing order in the na-tion's history, calling for the integration of 780,000 schoolchildren in Detroit and 53 suburban school

The plan calls for the busing of 310,000 children for dea-gragation, with blacks from the city going into the suburbs and whites from the suburbs moving to schools nearer the city.

The plan, ordered by Judge Stephen J. Roth, will be appealed by the state of Michigan and federal lawyers may attempt to

A spokesman for the Senate Select Committee on Equal Educational Opportunity said yesterday that the most farreaching busing order now in effect is in Tampa, Fla., where 52,-800 students—51 percent of the district's total—are being bused. Although the Supreme Court declared school segregation unconstitutional in 1954, busing did not begin on a large scale until after the Supreme Court declared the "freedom-of-choice" tem unconstitutional in 1968.

Busing increased as a result tha Supreme Court's decision March of last year, in which the court unanimously approved a desegregation plan that aimed at achieving a uniform racial balance in all of the elementary schools of Charlotte, N.C.

Last year, the process was carried a step further in Richmond Va., where a U.S. District Court ordered the predominantly black Richmond school district to merge with two predominantly white suburban districts. Cross-busing was ordered to achieve integra-

Mr. Kissinger said. "No decision of this magnitude could have been taken unless it had been part of a larger decision to place relations on a new foundation of restraint, cooperation and eteadily evolving confidence," he told the congressmen, Major Break

The two accords "represent a major break in the pattern of suspicion, hostility and confrontation which has dominated U.S.-Soviet relations for a generation,' he said. "The two great nuclear powers must not let this opportunity slip away by jockeying for marginal advantages.

When asked why the United States had agreed to construct only two ABM sites in light of earlier arguments that a 12-site system was needed partly to defend against a Chinese light nuclear attack, he replied that the likelihood of a Chinese attack had markedly decreased as a result of the President's visit to Peking.

Mr. Kissinger left tonight for his fourth visit to Peking in less than a year. He will confer for four days next week in the Chinese capital at a time when there is renewed hope a Vietnam settlement may be possible.

Replying to charges that the agreements perpetuate a U.S. strategic disadvantage, Mr. Kissinger said that was incorrect for two reasons:

on balance "advantagrous to the United States" and second the interim agreement "perpetuates nothing which did not already exist in fact and which could only have gotten worse without an agreement."

Duc Tho, Hanei'e Polithuro memher who intermittently conducts the more important secret talks in Paris with Mr. Rissinger, left Paris Saturday for a 10-day visit to Bulgaria.

Mr. Tho, in an interview with The Washington Post before ins departure, said that he was swalting word of a possible new meeting with Mr. Kissinger. They last met in Paris on May 2, before the Moscow summit and before the American mining of North Virtnam's harbors on May 8 to cut Nice: Soviet shipping supply lines to North Vietnam.

Above all, North Vietnam has been waiting, with noticeable anxiety, for fuller information about what happened in Moscow between its major ally, the Soviet Union, and its major adversary, the United States -

Mr. Podgorny's trip to Hanol will give North Vietnam its first direct Soviet account of the secret conversations that the aliestion of foreign oil inte whole top level of the Kremlin or other Arab countries the leadership had with Mr. Nixon to do the same. about Vietnam.

The President told a joint session of Congress on June 1, the night he returned from his summit travels, that "the problem of ending the Vietnam war, which engages the hopes of all Americans, was one of the most extensively discussed subjects on our agenda." He declined to provide any details, however, saying, "It would only jeopardize the search for peace if I were to review here all that was said on this subject ..." Mr. Podgorny's brief public comments about Vietnam, made yesterday in Calcutta on the way to Hanoi, similarly aroused speculation without disclosing what, if anything, the Soviet Union will recommend to its North Vietnamese ally: "The Vietnam problem should be immediately solved. America should cease bombing. The United States should leave Vietnam."

Higher Priority With the latest announced Kissinger trip to Peking, both of Hanol'e chief allies have shown that they put a higher priority on broadening their own relationships with the United States than they put on North Vietnam'e vital

At the same time the Soviet Union and China have reiterated their loyalty to North Vietnam's cause. But the Soviet Union also has accepted the American mining of North Vietnam'e harbors. China, in the space of 48 hours, has issued its strongest warning in more than a year about "grave provocations" caused by the American bombing of North Vietnam near China's borders, and then announced a new visit by Mr. Kissinger.

However, neither Moscow nor Peking, U.S. experts concede, has the power or influence to compel

Mariner-9 Reveals Dynamism on Mars

By John Noble Wilford PASADENA, Calif., June 15 (NYT).—A clear and often sur-prising portrait of Mars as a distinctive, dynamic planet is emerging from the pictures and data returned by Mariner-9, the spacecraft that has been circling Mars twice a day for the last seven months.

Scientists are discovering Mars to be a varied world or sharp relief and many contrasts, a world that has been shaped in part by water, and, therefore, may be or may have been suitable for some forms of life.

They are seeing, as never before, a world of high winds, great temperature extremes, clouds of water as well as of dust, towerwater as well as of disk, towering well-inos, chasms larger and

And they are concluding that they were wrong when after Mariners-4, 6 and 7 discovered such bleak vistas, they figured that Mars must be a dead world, more like the moon than anything else. They were misled, they said, because they saw only part that happened to be the older cratered regions, and Mariner-9, is now-surveying about 85 percent in remarkable detail.

At a news conference here, Robert H. Steinbacher, the project scientist, said:

"Mars used to be likened to earth in science fiction, and was compared to the moon after the irst pictures from Mariner 4 in Now, we are seeing that Mars has a character all its own. It is not earth-like or moon-like; it is Mars-like."

At the news conference and in series of interviews, Mariner scientists agreed that the most important discovery thus far in-volves the growing evidence that water has played an active role in the planet's evolution.

scientists believe that the south polar ice can is parily frozen water, not all frozen carbon dioxide, or dry ice. They have also detected water vapor in some of the finffy white clouds capping some of the volcanic mountain peaks.

But Harold Masursky, of the U.S. Geological Survey, leader of the television examination team, said that the most sin-vincing evidence is found in the many photographs showing deep,

"We are forced to no other conclusion," Mr. Masursky said in an interview, "but that we are seeing the effects of water on Mars."

Moreover, he said, some of the water erosion may be fairly recent, geologically speaking—per-haps within the last 50,000 years.

Water Release

Mr. Masursky and other scientists auggest two explanations for how enough water rould be released on the planet to cause the apparent rains and floods.

Since the axis of the planet slowly wobbles, or precesses, as Mars travels around the sun, the polar regions are sometimes ex-posed to increased doses of sun-This occurs in cycles of 50,000 years. As a result, the polar caps may melt completely, releasing enough moisture into the thin Martian atmosphere to cause heavy rainfalls all over the planet.

Another theory is based on vol-canic heat melting water ice stored beneath the Martian surface as permafrost. The earth's gater sprang from volcanic ipors, and the new evidence of past volcanic activity on Mars suggests that the same processes may have been at work thereexcept that most of the water froze and was trapped below the

Since volcanic activity seems to have extended over a long period of time on Mars, the scientists said that there may have been occasions when the heat thawed out the permafrost, producing sufficient water to etch out many of the canyons and sinuous "riverbeds" seen in so many of the Mariner pictures.

Central to Studies

"The presence or absence of water is obviously central to our studies," Mr. Masuraky said. Has there been in the past water on Mars, and is it there now? The answer is central to the question of whether Mars has been a suitable place for the development of life." Without answering directly the question of life on Mars, Mr. Masursky said that Mariner-9's results increase the likelihood that future missions to land on the planet may find some signs of life, or at least fossils of past early as next year. Mariner-9 has transmitted nearly 7.000 television pictures of Mars since it swung into an orbit of the planet last November, the first spacecraft to circle Mars. It has new completed 428 revolutions, following a course ranging from 1,000 to 1,200 miles from the surface.

RAPID CITY, S.D., June 15 (NYT),—The list of persons still nissing in this flood-stricken city dropped yesterday as duplications were eliminated, new reports of disaster control center and a few more bodies were recovered.

At the same time, officials a nearby Sturgis reported that the water level at a badly eroded dam above the town had been reduced. Thus, the danger of another flood such as the one that struck Rapid City last weekend was lessened As of Yesterday afternoon, 950 persons were listed as missing, a reduction of about 1,000 in 24 hours. The death toll stood at 204 an increase of two since Tuesday. County Commissioner Ronald G. Stephenson said that the list of missing persons apparently contained many duplications. The American National Red Cross reported that 600 houses and 300 mobile homes had been destroyed, 800 houses had suffered major damage, 400 had minor damage and 300 mobile homes were damaged.

The presumed Soviet opponents of the summit talks have not been indentified, but the recent demotion of Pyotr Y. Shelest, a Polithuro member, from the prestigious leadership of the Ukraine has been attributed in some quarters to opposition to Mr. Nixon's visit.

These reports have not been confirmed, and Mr. Shelest remains a member of the Politburo despite his shift to Moscow, where he has become one of 10 deputy premiers under Premier Alexei N. Kosygin.

The Pravda article, signed Yu. Chernov, was the latest in a series of official commentaries hailing the Soviet-American talks as having laid a basis for a new relationship between the two nuclear superpowers.
Some of the analyses have been couched in a somewhat defensive tone as if to suggest that the current conciliatory attitude to-ward the United States has not met universal approval.

Basic Principles

Mr. Chernov, who could not immediately be identified and may have been using a pseudonym, attached particular importance to the "Basic Principles of Rela-tions," a 12-point statement that was among the agreements signed during the summit talks. In the statement, the two sides pledged that they would "do their utmost to avoid military confrontations and to prevent the outbreak of nuclear war" and undertook "to exercise restraint in their mutual relations and to negotiate and settle differences by peaceful means."

Stressing the significance of these principles, Pravda said:
"It is difficult to exaggerate the importance of the fact that the U.S.S.R. and the U.S., the two biggest powers in military poten-tial, belonging to two different social systems, thus agreed in a virtual treaty to build their relations on such a basis." The Communist party daily also sought to reply to speculation that a secret agreement had been reached by Mr. Nixon and the Soviet leaders on the Vietnam

It said that the communique. in dealing with unresolved is tues, had set forth the standpoint of each side unflaterally. Pravda described the commu

Obituaries Nobel Prize Winner Georg von Bekesy

HONOLULU, June 15 (AP).— Georg Von Bekesy, 73, who wan the Nobel Prize in 1961 for his research on the delicate machinery of the human ear, died here of cancer Tuesday. Dr. Bekesy had been professor of sensory sciences at the University of Hawaii since 1966. He left his native Hungary in 1946 and came to the United States after a brief stay in Sweden. He was on the faculty of Harvard University from 1947 until he came to Hawaii.

Dr. Bekesy was originally a physicist and engineer of telecommunications in Hungary. His efforts before World War II to improve telephone clarity led him to study the anatomy of the ear. He took a belated medical degree in Germany.

He was known as one of the world'e outstanding researchers in the field of anatomy and physiology of the ear. His work on the machinery of the ear is credited with forming the scientific basis for recent advances to treatment of deafness.

Shirley Temple Urges Bigger Role For Women in Saving Environment

By Joe Alex Mortis In.

STOCKHOLM, June 15.—Shirley Temple emerged here today as a women's lib advocate, although a mild one.

Ms. Black, a member of the U.S. delegation to the U.N. Conference on the Human Environment, amnounced the for-mation of something called "Earth's Better Half."

"Don't smile, this is serious," she sternly admonished skeptical reporters at the American delegation press briefing. Mrs. Black said that the environment conference could be a turning point in world affairs—"but only if women are involved." Then she said that of the delegations here, only

"This is one more shocking indication of the submissive role played by women in their societies," she said.

She demanded "a radical change of attlinde" toward. women. Her group, with sociologist Margaret Mead as chairwomen, her group, with sorthagest marginal main in their women, is trying to sign up all the women delegates here for the manifesto, which is being sent to all delegation heads. # U.S. Doctors Warn Tourists Against Drug for Diarrhea

By Stuart Auerbach

WASHINGTON, June 15 (WP). -Three U.S. government doctors have warned against the most commonly used remedy for the attacks of diarrhea and stomach cramps that afflict tourists around the world.

In a letter and an editorial in the Journal of the American Medical Association, the doctors said that the commonly used Entero-Vioform does not prevent diarrhea and may indeed be Doctors in Japan have reportedly linked an outbreak of 10,000 cases of a severe neurological disease to the use of Entero-Vioform. In April, the first reported American case of the dis-ease also was aid to the use of Entero-Vioform while the patient was in Mexico and other cases have been reported in Australia and Sweden.

As a result, the Japanese aothorities banned the drug. The Australians made it a prescription drug instead of allowing it to be sold over the counter, but it is still sold that way in many countries.

The Food and Drug Administration is expected to advise doctors to stop prescribing Entero-Violorm, but the agency says lews prevent strict regulatory action against the drug.

The three government doctor -Myron Schultz, Martin Wolfe and George Mishtwot-said that studies have shown that Entero-Vioform does no good in preventing what is known as Montezuma's revenge, Delhi belly, or just plain tourista.

A study just completed by the U.S. Center for Disease Control among scientists who attended a recent international conference in Mexico City found no difference in the "high attack rates of tourista" between those scientists who took Entero-Vioform and those who took no drugs.

"This study not only sheds light on the efficacy of iodochlorhydroxyquin (the generic name for Entero-Vioform) but attests to its popularity; the conference was the international congress of Dr. Schutz wrote In a letter to the AMA Journal,

The London vote involved 1,000 men working in the Royal Group of docks, who voted to stop work from 9 p.m. tonight. In Liverpool, dockers wated misifference to dockers voted mishimously to stop work at 8 s.m. comprow.

The three shop stewards failed to appear before the court today to explain why they delled an order to end refusal to unload containers at an East London terminal

The three, Bernard Steer, Alan Williams and Victor Turner, remained on picket duty outside the container terminal. Arrest Threatened

If they have not appeared before the court by tomorrow, court chairman Sir John Donaldson said warrants will be issued for their arrest.

Jack Jones, general secretary of the Transport and General Workers Union, said today that arrest of the three men would cause a grave crisis. "It is an explosive situation which can only be relieved by negotiation and conciliation," Mr.

Jones said in urging the govern-ment to try to prevent the dockers arrest. The TGWU executive voted yesterday to delay for six weeks a planned national strike over the container issue, but their decision was greeted with abuse and a shower of placards by dockers who forced their way into the union hall. More than 20,000 dockers struck yesterday in a show of militancy.

Dockers have complained that shipping firms are moving inland and employing non-union men to load containers, depriving union dockers of their jobs.

HUD Reverses Its Decision on Lead-Base Paint

WASHINGTON, June 15 (AP). Responding to warnings that lives of young children are in danger, the Department of Housing and Urban Development has reversed itself and ordered removal of flaking lead-base paint from dwellings under its inristiction.

Most paint made before 1950 contains a lead base. If eaten, finkes or peelings of this paint can cause severe mental and physical disability, including vomiting, fever and even paralysis. The U.S. Public Health Service yesterday released a survey of 27 cities, made in 1971, which indicated that as many as 75 contain interior lead-paint surfaces within easy reach of children, who sometimes eat the paint off walls and other surfaces. Congress sought to eliminate the hazard in both public and private housing by passing the Lead Paint Poisoning Prevention Act in December, 1971; HUD first ordered "complete"

removal or coverup of all leadbase paint from an estimated five to seven million housing units it owned or leased. But the order had been rescinded on discovery that the cost could run as high as $17 billion.

African Summit Talks End With Appeal for Liberation

RABAT, June 15 (Reuters).-The Organization of African Unity ended its ninth summit meeting here today with a call from King Hassan of Morocco to make the coming year one of liberation on the African continent.

The king, newly elected as OAU chairman, said that last year had been one of reconciliation among Africans.

Other speakers in the threehour closing session, which was beld in public, also praised the trend toward reconciliation between African countries and

Uganda Releases All on BOAC Jet It Impounded

ENTEBBE, Uganda, June 15 (AP).—Passengers aboard a British airliner impounded here yesterday were allowed today to continue their journey, but there was no indication when the plane would be released.

Most of the 44 passengers aboard the BOAC VC-10 from London to Lusaka were Britons going to Zambia with their families to take up jobs.

The aircraft was impounded apparently because it was carrying two tons of arms to Zambia. Although 'Uganda's relations with Zambia were strained last year following the army coup that brought President Idi Amin to power, they have since improved.

The passengers said they had been held at the airport for 12 hours before being allowed to transfer to a hotel.

the passengers complained that airport officials had warned them that they would spend the night in prison if they did not change their miniskirts for pants. Miniskirts were banned here by

Reagan to Visit Europe As Envoy of Nixon

WASHINGTON, June 15 (Reuters).-Gov. Ronald Reagan of California will visit a number of west Laropean tountries next month to express the importance President Nixon attaches to U.S. ties with Europe, the White House announced yesterday.

Gov. Reagan will leave the United States on July 2 and visit Denmark, Belgium, France, Italy, Ireland and Britain es well as other countries to be

King Hassan said that Africans owed it to themselves to make the coming year the year of liberation, especially since Africans had "not only decided to strengthen the struggle, but also to conquer themselves by uniting as much as possible."

To illustrate the spirit of reconciliation, King Hassan and Algerian President Houari Boumedienne signed an accord that settled a 10-year frontier dispute between the neighboring North African

Speakers also hailed the recent settlement of disputes between the Congo and Zaire, between Senegal and Guinea and between Ghana and Guinea and the rapprochement between rival liberation movements in Angola

Amilcar Cabral of Guinea-Bissao, secretary - general of the African Party for the Independence of Guinea and Cape Verde, thanked the summit meeting for increasing donations to finance guerrilla activity by 50 percent and said that he hoped that the 10th summit, to be held next May in Addis Ababa, would double this increase. He appealed to all non-African states to stop giving assistance to Portugal.

Mr. Cabral said that the Rabat meeting, although "not a victory," was a decisive turning point at which Africa would enter a new stage of combative reconciliation. The closing session saw the swearing-in of the organization's new secretary-general, Nzo Ekan-gaki, Cameroun minister of labor and social welfare, who replaces Diallo Telli of Guinea, who had held the office for eight years. President Boumedienne said that the accords he signed with BONN, June 15 (AP) .- A spokesman for Gerhard Schroeder said Tuesday that the former Christian Democratic foreign minister will visit China from July 13 to 28.

The announcement, setting dates for the previously anticipated visit, came amid the growing possibility that early elections will take place late this year or early next year in order to solve a parliamentary deadlock, The timing of Mr. Schroeder's trip increased the possibility that Bonn may shift its foreign-policy emphasis from Moscow to Peking If the opposition Christian Democrats gain power in new elections.

Extradition of 10 Hijackers Is Ruled Out by Bonn

West German government is refusing to extradite 10 Czechoslovake who hijacked a small pessenger plane to West Germany on June 8 and requested asylum, Transportation Minister Georg Leber said today.

Mr. Leber announced the decision in a letter sent to the West German airline, Lufthansa, and three labor unions, including the pilots' association, Cockpit.

The hijacking last week had been "plotted for weeks" by the seven men and three women who carried it out, police said. The Czechoslovak captain of the plane, Jan Micica. 52, was shot to death during the hijacking.

The Czechoslovak government demanded extradition of the hijackers the day after it happened. Last weekend, John J. # Back to the Table

The return to Paris of the American negotiator, Ambassador William Porter, and the prospective return of North Vietnam's delegation chief, Xuan Thuy, suggest the approach of another monsoon negotiating season. Now that a new military equilibrium has emerged on the ground and the weather is too soggy for decisive battles, both sides may be ready for some serious talking about a compromise settlement.

The important talking is unlikely to be done in the semipublic conference at which Messrs. Porter and Thuy preside. But its resumption is Hanoi's precondition for renewing the private talks between North Vietnamese Politburo member Le Duc Tho and President Nixon's security adviser, Henry Kissinger. Last year at this time, the most productive period in the two-year Kissinger-Tho series, the two emissaries met secretly six times between May and September and, according to Mr. Kissinger, reached agreement in principle on several points of the nine-point Communist peace plan. Since then, both sides have made new public proposals and President Nixon has discussed e Vietnam settlement at length in Peking and Moscow.

Mr. Nixon undoubtedly sought Soviet support last month for the next round of Paris peace talks. The fact that Mr. Kissinger's chief Vietnamese expert will accompany him to Peking next week suggests an effort will be made again there to enlist Chinese heip

If there is reason for hope about renewed talks, it stems from two factors. First,

Hanoi knows that President Nixon's interest in ending the war will be great between now and the November election. He accepted a Soviet edge in numbers of strategic missiles in the Moscow SALT agreement that, however safe in sophisticated military terms, few Democratic Presidents would have found politically feasible. He might do something comparable in Vietnam but his military reactions, if re-elected, are unpredictable. All this makes Hanoi's interest in a settlement before November equal to Mr. Nixon's.

Secondly, the military situation in South Vietnam has settled back into a stalemate after some spectacular Communist gains, despite the open entry of the bulk of the North Vietnamese Army into the battle. "A respectable argument can be made that, as long as the Communist-bloc countries continue to supply the North and the United States to support and supply the South, the war could continue indefinitely," Times correspondent Charles Mohr has reported after a thorough investigation of the military situation on key fronts.

Neither side wants an indefinite war. The question that now must be faced in Paris is whether both are prepared to give up hopes of early victory and settle for a compromise coalition government. Only a compromise government could bind up the wounds of war, reconstruct the country with great power aid and seek eventually to achieve a political accommodation within Vietnam to match that now evolving internationally among the Communist and non-Communist world powers.

'No Moral Obligation'

Former Attorney General John Mitchell, now President Nixon's campaign manager, demonstrates contempt for public opinion in his refusal to disclose the names of pre-April 7 contributors to the GOP. Before the new federal campaign expenditure law went into effect two months ago, Republican money raisers led by former Secretary of Commerce Maurice Stans had hustled about and collected more than $10 million to help underwrite Mr. Nixon's bid for re-election. The amount is revealed in the reports of eash on hand, which the GOP committees have to file under the new law, but the names of the donors are not. Mr. Mitchell told interviewers the other day that there were about 100,000 contributors and that these well-heeled people cherish their privacy because they do not want to "become targets for other solicitations."

It hardly seems likely that these secret contributors are worried about being pestered by the United Givers Fund or agents of George McGovern. After all they can always say "no." Could it possibly be that in the grand tradition of the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. they want to have influence with the Nixon administration but wish to keep that influence concealed? Unthinkable, replied Mr. Mitchell.

And what of the ordinary voters who were not invited to private dinners with Mr. Stans or asked to write large checks before April 7, the deadline after which names of contributors would have had to be reported? Are they entitled to no explanation of who is putting up the cash to elect the President of their country? Mr. Mitchell disposed of those tiresome questions. "We have no moral obligation to disclose where the money came from," he

Edmund Wilson

The death of Edmund Wilson in the old stone house of his ancestors in the Adirondacks that he lovingly made come alive in "Upstate," his recently published journal, leaves a void that no American critic can altogether fill. Mr. Wilson was no ordinary man. His formidable erudition was not of the static kind nor did it have any mustiness of academia; he had an intellectual curiosity that took him deep into a variety of subjects which caught him up over the years, and he was excited by excellence in a way that readers had to feel. His book on the Dead Sea scrolls, for which learning Hebrew was part of his research, certainly most have meant more to many more people than anything written by scholars closer to the discovery. And his "Patriotic Gore," examining the literature of the Civil War, probably sent more readers back to sources than anything of its kind.

Mr. Wilson published a novel, some poetry and a volume of short stories, "The Memoirs of Hecate County," which would cause hardly a ripple among the book banners today but brought up a storm a generation ago. None of that would have attracted much notice had it been written by anyone else. There were other aberrations like the polemic "The Cold War and the Income Tax" and his passionate fling with Soviet Communism, which he later viewed sardonically and apologetically. But as a critic he was pre-eminent. And he was a superb reporter of the kind who answered the questions a reader might have asked.

In the recent memoir, a threnody for a dying way of life, there was a weariness and resignation that made the news of his death this week not unexpected. He felt he was a man of the 19th century, although he experienced only five years of it. Edmund Wilson was a patrician who might have felt more at home in the gentler ways of an earlier day, but 20th century American letters are immeasurably richer for his having been a part of them.

Paris Peace Talks

After the hot comes the cold. The return to Paris of Mr. Porter and Mr. Kissinger's statement in Tokyo that the United States is making every possible concession, had temporarily given rise to relative optimism. An American clarification has somewhat altered that vision of things: American "authorized circles" cautiously suggested that the Hanoi government has doubtless made it known that it is ready to resume the negotiation seriously.

This American cautiousness is surprising indeed: Hanoi has never hinted-far to the contrary—that it was disposed to give up any of the points of its so-called peace plan. It has in this regard the merit of frankness and continuity. One thing is certain: Something is moving for better or worse as far as the Vietnamese negotiation is con-

When Moscow Turns the Tap

By C. L. Sulzberger

BRUSSELS.—Western Europe is increasingly concerned about prospects not only that its strategic defenses, as devised in the North Atlantic Alliance, but also its economic stability may be directly threatened by Russian advances in the Mediterranean.

For some years maintenance of sizable Soviet fleet there coupled with Moscow's political penetration in many peripheral lands, has worried NATO leaders.

They see their armed forces already outflanked from the north where Soviet air and naval strength respectively have a 7to-1 and 4-to-1 superiority. Since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, when the Kremlin decided to accelerate its Mediterranean drive, NATO has become equally alarmed about prospects of being outflanked from the south.

Mitigate Danger

The hope, of course, is that the trend toward East-West détente will reduce the threat of crisis and thus mitigate the darger of strategic imbalance. However, it may be recalled, all talk of arranging a Mutual and Balanced Force Reduction between the North Atlantic and Warsaw Pacts is at present limited to search for a formula covering only the vital central sector, not the northern and southern flanks.

Now Western statesmen add to their strategic pessimism in the Mediterranean another worry— Europe'e peacetime dependence on Soviet good will, thanks to its reliance upon Middle East oil. A report on "Europe and the Mediterranean," just endorsed by the Assembly of the Western European Union, stresses that Moscow is gaining a position when, at will, it can close the fuel spigot on which this area's economic advance depends. This report says in part:

The Soviet Union has been able to adapt its oil policy to the claims of the Arab countries the Iraqi government decided to seize [the very rich] Rumaila offield and set up e national firm to exploit it. In this, active help was received from the Soviet Union which provided the national Tragi firm with tech-nicians and took over the marketing and distribution."

The report contends Moscow was encouraged to press its Arab oil penetration "because it can already see the threat of a Chinese policy looming up . . . the United States will be affording China assistance in oil technology which will allow it to modernize its methods and train technicians who could provide a start for its oil policy in the Middle East . . .

"There is now therefore a risk of the Soviet Union, and even China, playing a very strong role in the Middle East and becoming major oil traders. Europe has no advantage in having the Communist countries lay hands on vital resources . . .

"In April 1972 a pact of friendship and cooperation was signed between the Soviet Union and Iraq which may bring Iraq into the sphere of Soviet influence. There is an obvious link between this political pact and cooperation on oil matters and the upshot is to bring the Soviet Union to the shores of the Persian Gulf, improve its communications with Syria and Egypt and further encircle Turkey; in short, Soviet presence in the Middle East is strengthened considerably.

"Thus Soviet Mediterranean policy is no longer limited to a naval presence which is but one aspect of an overall plan which threatens Western positions in an essential sector."

The New York Times editorial (IHT. Without wishing in any way to denigrate the West German intention of giving grants to American scholars, I should like to call attention to a similar, and much earlier, expression of grati-tude for Marshall aid. This is the British program started almost 20 years ago, whereby scholarships are granted to students in every region of the United States for study in the British university of their choice.

As a former member of the Southern Selection Committee of Marshall scholars, I am dismayed by the chronic lack of recognition in the American press of this far prompter and most generous expression of thanks for what Churchill termed "the most unsordid act in history."

The De-Escalation of Criticism

By Leslie Gelb and Anthony Lake

WASHINGTON.—The war in Vietnam has escalated. The voices of criticism in Washington

Why? Have the war critics come over to the President's side? No. Has boredom overtaken passion? For some people, yes. Have some given up in frustration about changing the President's policies? Yes, some have.

But most war critics in Washington, we think, have silenced themselves for two reasons: fear of charges of undercutting the President and fear of being undercut by him.

In a recent column, James Reston of The New York Times lashed out against the critics. He argued that opposition to President Nixon's policy makes Hanoi more intransigent. That may be true in a tactical sense. Hanoi does use criticism here in its propaganda. It also hopes internal American differences will provide the stimulus for any early American withdrawal. But the basic fallacy of charges about undercutting the President is this: no matter how unified the American public in support of President Nixon's goals in Vietnam, Hanoi will not give up its own goals and ambitions. It the American presence in Vietnam which is prolonging the war, not the voices of criticism at home. And it is in Washington, not Hanoi, where American voices have their greatest effect.

Now's the Time

If there is a chance of changing the President's policy, it is now when he faces an election campaign, not later, should he be re-elected. The U.S. presence in Vietnam would be far larger than today were it not for the public opposition of the past. Without strong opposition now, the President is free to pursue a policy which many opponents of the war believe will not work and is wrong. He should not expect them to unite behind such

Why then are so many critics' voices still when they know that uniting behind an unworkable policy cannot make it work and when they should know that charges of undercutting the President are invalid? For some the reason for silence is fear of being undercut themselves, the simple fear of looking foolish. They are wary that the President has an ace up his sleeve. Despite their convictions, they hesitate on the chance that President Nixon might find peace or military success, and force them to admit the error of any pessimistic predictions they might make. While believing that America should not sacrifice human life to save face in Victnam, they fear losing face themselves should the President keep his promise to "pull the rug out"

Thus the inhibiting power in Washington of the rumor of imminent success: a secret Vietnam deal worked out in Moscow by Secretary-General Brezhnev and Henry Kissinger ... speculation that current U.S. terms for settlement are a disguise for successful American withdrawal... hints by Mr. Kissinger in private conversations that U.S. peace proposals are more lenient than they appear... public predictions by men such as Sen. Hugh Scott that peace may be around the corner. And many critics never seem to forget the President's own warning that Vietnam would not be an issue in the 1972 elec-from under them.

There are three reasons why such critics should put aside their fear and refuse to be immobilized. First, the "aces" up our Presidents' sleeves have turned out when disclosed in the past, to be little better than jokers. Military escalation has never done more than postpone Saigon's reverses. It is unlikely that even the mining and bombing can provide on the stuff of Heavy Rissis what President Nixon calls until 1970. # Leopold Stokowski's Encore Concert—60 Years Later

By Henry Pleasants

LONDON, June 15 (IHT).-Leopold Stokowski has always been an extraordinary man, and he has never seemed more extraordinary than at the Royal Festival Hail last night, standing-yes, standing-before the London Symphony Orchestra and conducting a program identical to the one he conducted in his first concert with that same orchestra 60 years ago, on May 22, 1912.

He was 90 just two months ago, an edvanced age even for conductors. Among the great ones of our time, or of any other for that matter, only Arturo Toscanini, Pierre Monteux and Tullio Serafin came close to it. All three conducted as long as they lived, but they all died within months of their 90th birthdays, Pablo Casals. to be sure, is still conducting at 95, but be has been only secondarily a conductor.

not least of all because of the piano parts, which are pianistically conceived and not merely a reduction of an orchestral conception. That is the way it was performed in the chapel of the Versailles palace, with Aldo Ciccolini and Giuseppe La Licata as planists, Denise Comtet-Chirat playing the harmonium part on the chapel organ, four competent soloists and a small chorus—although not quite as small nor as sexually distributed as Rossini's facetious note

Mario Rossi's restrained conducting was a reminder that at the first performance Rossini turned the pages for the first planist and nodded his head for the cues. In the resonant confines of the chapel, even the small Italian chorus had to move gently to honor the dynamic indications and stick to the salon-sized dimensions of the work.

The veteran Sesto Bruscantini was the comic plvot of the performance as Dandini, the servant masquerading as prince, and he was ably seconded by Giorgio Tadeo as the builo father and Ugo Benelli, both smooth-voiced and droll as the tenor prince. Giancario Sbragio's staging had some nice touches as well as routine solutions, but Alfred Silbermann's monumental scenery

From this selection, it is clear that Stokowski knew as early as 1912 just where his talent and his predilections lay. All these pieces. excluding the concerto, have remained among his favorite and finest accomplishments. Each in its way lends itself to the kind of visionary, inspirational, non-traditional approach to music that has always distinguished him from any other conductor, and especially to his unique concern for sound as such.

It may be assumed that last night's performances were closer to those of the LSO in 1912 than to those perpetuated in his recordings with the Philadelphia Lifactorily characteristic performances have always heen achieved with orchestras he has himself molded: the Philadelphia Orchestra, the American Youth Orchestra and, more recently, the American Symphony Orchestra in New York, As was also true of Furtwängler, Stokowski travels best with his own band.

The problem is his reluctance to accept notation as hely writ, or any one performance as definitive. An orchestra has to read him as well as the notes, and It has to read him afresh from measure to measure. It takes some conditioning, more than can be achieved in a couple of rehearsals.

I remember a time when, as critic of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, I suggested that Sto-kowski tended to take over where the composer had left off. A few days later, he told a youth concert audience:

"Some people say that we put more into the music than is there. Not at all. It's simply that we get more out of the music than other orchestras do."

He had something there-most of the time. And with an orchestra as accomplished as the LSO, and as eager to do his bidding, he can still do it.

players in the land and a hope-ful nonprofessional in every other home. The French respond to its music as the Vlennese respond to that of the wine-garden zither or the Hungarians to that of the gypsy violin. The vast public has elected it as Its favorite instrument and its appeal is apparently all-embracing

The accordion is to the popular Gallic singer what the 12-stringed guitar is to the American exponent of folk song. Valery Giscard d'Estaing, minister of finance, plays it when he is not doing his addition. The music shops reveal that sales are mounting and that millions of accordion records are sold yearly. Edouard Duleu, known as the king of the accordion and president of the expanding Accor-dionists' Society, believes that its secret is in making everyone bappy.

Damp Festival

He cites the 15,000 people who recently spent a damp weekend in Montmorency, at the first international accordion festival. Festivities were inaugurated with a mass in the local church with Bach, Handel and Mendelssohn transposed for accordion. Then for most of two days and two nights the crowds gathered on the lawn of the town's chatean to hear a virtually nonstop concert of accordion music, some 250 singers and musicians participating in this Gallic Woodstock You should have seen their faces. exclaimed, describing the au- Montmartre streets, waterfront diences, who came equipped with raincoats and umbrellas.

"The accordion induces smiles. It can make people laugh with joy and it can stir nostalgic reverie, but it never makes anyone angry.'

Mr. Duleu's accordion playing is to be heard on a Paris radlo station three times a week. On Sunday he is on a national radio program. Twice a month he has an hour on television. The four other foremost French accordionists are Aimable (who has played to an audience of 65 million Americans on the Ed Sullivan show), Marcel Azzola, A. Verchuren and Yvette Horner, the outstanding feminine player.

Various Brands

There are various brands of native accordions: those for the bal musette, those for jazz, those for variety numbers and those for folk songs. At the recent international festival those of the German beer cellar, the Tyrolean Alps and those played to the gypsy orchestras of the Slavic countries and Spain made guest appearances.

nights and summertime picnics on the Marne—it came to France relatively recently. The elegant ladies of Louis Philippe's court indulged in concerting playing as a refined accomplishment. But it was the invasion of the Italian workmen after the fall of the Second Empire that gave it its enormous and increasing popu-larity in France. The Italians brought with them the humble music box for home entertainment and it began to be heard in the cases and on the street corners, eventually replacing the

The accordion soon found its way into the proletariat heart and very quickly became the accompaniment for the realistic singers, lamenting hard lives, hard luck and the pangs of unrequited affections. It has gained favor and importance ever since and it has been immortalized in literature in Carco's apache tales of Pigalle and in the lower-depths novel of Mac Orlan.

The first accordion festival at Montmorency, conceived and organized by Jacques Louvet and André Bezu, was so successful that Mr. Giscard d'Estaing invit-

News from a Big Swiss Bank

Credit Suisse continued to enjoy a grati-fying volume of business during the first quarter of 1972. The accelerating pace of economic activity in industrial nations provided an important stim-ulus to the bank with its worldwide operations.

Total assets increased by 3% to over SFr. 32 billion

Deposits increased by SFr. 731 million, with those from other-mostly foreign-banks accounting for SFr. 672 million. Client deposits were up SFr. 59 million. Time deposits declined by 1.1 billion francs, reflecting a reduction in trust accounts and lower interest rates which prompted depositors to shift their funds to other accounts. Thus, deposits in savings books, private and salary accounts increased by 293 million francs, medium-term notes by 308 million and checking accounts by over 500 million.

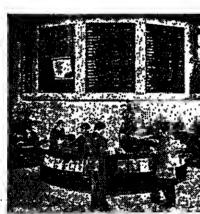

Credit demand continued strong. Simultaneously, our deposits with other banks rose by 10% to 15.7 billion francs, while our cash position maintained the high level of 2.5 billion.

A shift in foreign operations

The monetary realignment concluded in Washington last year and the high liquidity prevailing in the international financial markets during the first months of this year have resulted in a certain change of climatein foreign operations. Nevertheless, our international businesstraditionally a significant part of our activity-increased substantially, with greatly expanded volume in foreign exchange, underwriting and investment operations.

Our new branch offices in London and Nassau commenced operations and a Representative Office was opened in Tokyo. Thus, including its three subsidiaries in New York, Montreal and Nassau, Credit Suisse now has 17 foreign facilities and more than 90 branches in Switzerland.

Share capital increased to 450 million francs

As a result of the March capital stock issue, Credit Suisse's share capital now amounts to SFr. 450 million and its open reserves to more than 1 billion francs. The bank's own funds thus total 1.473 billion francs.

Tradition and Dynamism since 1856

Founded in 1856, Credit Suisse is a big Swiss bank. Backed by long tradition, yet dynamic and forward looking in its approach, it will continue to offer its clients throughout the world the type of imaginative and innovating service which has lead to its international standing and reputation.

Japan Export Curb Delayed

TOKYO, June 15 (AP-DJ),-A desk-top calculator export cartel organized by the Japan Machinery Exporters Association formally came into being today, but it suspended enforcement of controls on shipments abroad pending implementation of an "outsiders" clause on association non-mem-

The earle! was formed because of complaints from European mations and the United States that Japanese desk-top calculators have been flooding their markets.

The association originally decided to set an export quota for one year on calculators with 8 to 13 digit capacity and on printerequipped calculators with 14 digits or more for European countries, representing increases of 20 and 25 percent, respectively, from the number of calculators shipped in calendar 1971.

The quotas may be subject to adjustment, however, because of the "outsider" problem. Not all Japan's calculator makers, numbering more than 20, or exporters, are members of the association. The Ministry of International Trade and Industry may direct non-member firms to abide by the provisions of the cartel, but so far has not done so. A ministry official said it is likely this step will be taken, but he declined to forecast when

One non-member firm; Casio Computer, has filed a complaint with the Fair Trade Commission, apparently over the manner in which the quots was being allocated among manufacturers.

The cartel's quota of calculators to be shipped to Canada and the United States during the June 15 year is a 40 percent gain from shipments in calendar 1971. There is no provision for including association non-members in this

Sterling Gets Support of 2 Central Banks

Intervention Is First Since April Accord

LONDON, June 15 (AP-DJ) .--The French and Belgian central banks intervened to support the bound sterling, it was learned

It was the first time that such intervention has taken place since the six members of tha EEC and the candidate countries agreed an April 21 to keep their exchange rates within a maximum of 2 1.4 percent of the central rates. Under the terms of the monetary accord last December, a maximum 4,5 percent is permitted

Both central banks intervened in their local markets by buying sterling to keep it from piercing the recently narrowed mar-The exact amount purchased was not mentioned.

On the official foreign exchange market in Paris, sterling closed at 13.0350-.0450 francs, down from 13.0428-.0520 yesterday. The intervention reportedly took piece outside the normal market hours when sterling touched its new floor level of 13.0335 francs.

On the market here, sterling tumbled to its lowest level against the dollar since mid-February. The fall was prompted by fears of a nationwide strike of dockworkers before the weekend, At one stage in the late afternoon, one major bank quoted sterling at $2.5997-,6003.

Prices on the London Stock Exchange fell sharply with the Financial Times index of ordinary industrial shares down 15.8 at 490-its worst drop since Nov. 23, 1967, when it fell 17.5 points.

Industrial Output Rises in Britain

LONDON, June 15 (UPI),~ Pactory ouput showed a mixed performance in Britain In April, The manufacturing industry produced less while industrial output as a whole showed a slight improvement, according to oificial figures issued today.

The index for industrial production as a whole was 127.7 in April against 126.6 in March. The index is based on 1963 equals 100. The index for manufacturing industry, taken alone, was 128.7 compared with 129.0 a month

Officials said revisions had changed some earlier figures. In the three months February to April, they estimated that produc-WAL lower than in the previous three months while for the manufacturing industry separately there was a decline in output of 22 percent in the same period.

The coal miners' strike in Janbary and February collected the

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Cockerill Returns to Profitability

Cockerlil-Ourrée-Providence et Espérance-Longdos, the Belgian steel producer, has returned to profitability after reporting zero net income for 1971, and according to one high company official should be able to pay a small dividend for this year. He said that profit margins are improving due to steel selling prices rising faster than company costs. Cockerin, the result of a 1970 merger that groups virtually all the steelmaking facilities in the Liege area, was hurt last year by low steel prices and a strike. The official expects 1972 to be "an average year," with profits not as high as the above-average 1970 results.

Early Rally Collapses; Glamour Stocks Suffer

NEW YORK, June 15 (IHT .-Selected glamour and airline issues were battered down on the New York Stock Exchange today as an early rally collapsed in the last hour of trading.

Analysis attributed the turn-around to a lack of strong follow through to yesterday's sharp ad-

One analyst commented that market sentiment was not helped any by a remark from the State Department that there has been no change in Hanoi's attitude to the Vietnam peace talks. Part of yesterday's rise had stemmed from bopes that the two sides would get back to the bargaining table soon.

The Dow Jones industrial average declined 0.82 to 945.97 after being ahead 3 1/2 in early trading. Trading was moderate with volume trailing off to 16,94 million shares from 18.32 million yesterday.

KLM, the hardest hit airline, tumbled 3 1/4 points to 33. It reported a loss in the year ended March 31 against a profit the previous year. National Air-lines fell 2 to 43 1/2, Delta lost 1 3 4 to 50 7/8, Continental was down 1 3.8 to 21 3.8 and Northwest lost 3'4 to 46 1'4.

Prices on the atocks of firms in the soft contact lens market also retreated. Bausch & Lomb dip-ped 1'4 to 50 1'8 after falling 6 yesterday and Union Corp. lost 1 1.4 to 13 3.4. A Senate subcommittee on government regulations will bold hearings July 6-7 into the safety and efficacy of the soft contact lenses. General Motors, up more than 1 through midsession, added 1.4 at 77 1/2. Total early June U.S. car sales set a new high, led by strong gain at GM. IBM fell 2 1/4 to 397 1 2. Du Pont was off 2 1,'8 to 168 5.'8,

American-South African lost 1 1/4 to 5 1.2, and Polaroid eased 4 7 8 to 127 1/8. Zurn Industries alumped 6 1/2 to 23. It expects a lower first-quarter net and has also filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission for an offer of 572,000 Clorox gained 1 1/8 to 80. It. proposed a 3-for-1 stock split, an ncrease in its authorized common stock, and a 4 percent in-1.07 1.05 crease in the cash dividend.

No standards would be set for the regulation of the compensation of the managers of the oildrilling programs, however.

The legislation, drafted under explicit instructions from Congress, would not cover joint ventures among persons who are primarily engaged in oil and gas drilling, small programs of investment in oil and gas wells that are not offered to a broad public, and issuance of direct interests in oil and gas rights,

The chief characteristic of the investments that would be covered is that the investment programs are set up in such a way that the tax benefits from investing in these industries are flowed through to the indirect investors. The sales of such investments are generally limited to persone with taxable income of $50,000 a

BLONDIE

By Alan Truscott

Nearly every pair playing in the mixed team championship of the World Team Olympiad, in Miami Beach earlier this month, reached four hearts on the diagramed deal. But some had trouble making ten tricks. The declarer's chances were better if the hand was played from the South side.

In the auction shown, South opened with one heart on a rather weak suit and carried on to game when North contributed a limit raise. Some pairs played from the South side after opening with a weak no-trump and receiving a Stayman response.

Some West players led a club, giving the declarer an easy task. So West was inspired to lead a small diamond, which would have left the defense in control with a diamond ruff to come. The usual lead was a spade. This gave declarer an interesting problem. The best plan, although few thought of it, was to take three spade tricks, ending in the dummy, and then lead a low trump to the nine. If this had lost to West, any return would have been helpful to South

As it was, the declarer was well placed when the heart nine won. He could cash the heart ace and lead to the diamond king in dummy. This was a misguess in a sense, but he could survive continuing with a diamond to the nine. West could get two diamond tricks, but the defense could never make a club, since West was endplayed. He had to lead a club away from the king, and the game was made.

When North became the declarer, as often happened after responding one heart to an opening one-diamond bid, he went down more often. A few Easts found the winning lead of a diamond and West cooperated by ducking. Then East could split his heart honors and obtain a diamond ruff, with the club king eventually available as the setting

If East led a club the declarer was eventually reduced to guessing the location of the diamond jack with little to guide him. After a spade lead, however, North could adopt effectively the line of play described above: Three rounds of spades followed by a heart to the

Instead of down well with the member milking the sensational aspects the upper chamber. There of the story or making capital of the matter of Homer Thornis its cast of characters that includes, at the top, two Presidents, he has combined the personal elements and the historical to show a man whirled around by forces he could not control or ride. Many will say his punishment was greater than his fault. The Fortas episode is revealing because it reflected the climate of feeling in the Congress and in the country, because men used it to pay off political scores, to strike at the Warren court said at liberals and to express their frustration over the crime rate. riots, the spread of pornography and the absence of law and order. The incident is also a good example of Washington in action, of the way things get done, of the kind of honey pot it is to the men who know how to use it. Fortas, a poor, able and ambitious Tennessean, got to Yale Law School on a scholarship and made a brilliant record there, one good enough for Yale to ask him to stay on as a teacher. The time: though was at the very beginning of Roosevelt's first administration, when new governmental. agencies were cropping up all over the place and men with legal skill, administrative ability and originality of mind were needed to staff them. Fortas fitted the requirements handsomely and he flourished in the atmosphere of the New Deal. His legal experience gave him an expert knowledge of the way the agencies worked, of the personnel who manned them, and it convinced. him, after some hesitation, that a great deal of money could be made in private practice. One of his friends from those early days was Lyndon Baines Johnson, and it is one of the frontes of the story that it was them. Or why he continued Johnson's political society that association with Wolfson w brought on Fortas's misfortune, he know that he was embro For Fortas would not have some with the Securities and Exchato the Supreme Court has not commission and that the Volume to the high cowas, it took all the President's Above all, he was simply it persuasive efforts to get Fortas and to see his acts as of to accept. But that he was there was trouble from the beginning, because romors got around that the President was consulting the new justice whenever he felt like it an action justice was forced to quit that many regarded as an unseemly collaboration between two sovereign divisions of government.

When towards the end of President Johnson's full term, he nominated Fortas to the post of chief justice, all the resentment that had been gathering for the previous four years found its: focus. Those who resented the President, the Warren court, the general condition of the country finally found a way of expressing their feelings. Even so, the Presthe Senate had the choice approving Fortas or retain Warren—a ploy that did not whom the President had de nated to fill Fortas's sent and if he moved up. # Bouttier Seeking a Role As Boxing Leading Man

By Bernard Kirsch

PARIS, June 15 (IET).-Even when he turns pale moments before a fight, Jean-Claude Boutlier is handsome enough to become France's latest leading man. Bouttier will need more than looks, though, when he faces the "peast," Carlos Monson, the "mean, unfriendly" middleweight champion of the world, Saturday night before 40,000 spectators outdoors at Colombes Stadium, in a Paris suburb. Fortunately, the Frenchman can also punch with both hands and dance on his spindly legs and he stands a fighting chance of giving his country its first world middleweight champion since Marcel Cerdan, who became France's post World War II romantic hero by knocking out Tony Zale in Jersey City in 1948.

In the last two months, France has gone into a Bouttier frenzy. Three books on Bouttier's life, one-such entitled "15 Rounds of My Life," have been published. Bouttier's sharpfeatured smooth face this week adorns the cover of Paris-Match, a leading French magazine. Already $500,000 in gate receipts reportedly has been collected, and the $100 ringside seats, an unheard of price for any happening in France, have just about been sold out. France has always been a pro-middleweight country.

'Speed and Power'

Boutiler's manager, Jean: Bretonnel, has said, "It is in the middleweights only where you can combine speed and power of punch."

The French love affair with the middleweight class began with the "Pink Orchid." Georges Carpentier, who lost his chance at the title in 1912 on a foul. Then came Marcel Thil and Cerdan, both of whom succeeded. Thil won the title in 1932, when he was 28 and hald and vacated the title in 1937, several months after he fought the last middleweight title bout in France until Saturday.

Cerdan lost the title in 1949, and was killed in a plane crash that same year. Soon came sweet-sounding names like Robert Villemain, Laurent Dauthuille and Pierre Langlois, but they never reached the top.

And now comes Bouttier, who is not afraid to talk about his fear in a dressing room before a bout, and who is not afraid to say that he had to go to the United States to learn what boxing is all about.

Hand to Month

Bouttier, 27, born in Saint-Pierre-la-Cour and now living with his wife and child in Gourney-sur-Marne, outside Paris, has always carved out a living by the use of his hands—from butcher, to truck driver, to cheese cutter, to boxer.

After a mediocre amateur career, Bouttler turned pro in 1965 and won his first 36 bouts, all in France. His first two losses came in 1969, both to Juarez de Lima of Brazil, and that year, the Frenchman began making his annual excursions to the once exciting boxing world of the United States to put the finishing touches to his trade.

"First, it was one month in New York, at Bobby Gleason's gym." said Bouttier recently at the Institut National des Sports, in the Bois de Vincennes in Paris, where he spent a half-hour a day talking to the press, building an image, and being as helpful to everyone as possible. Then he would work out with the two sparring partners he brought from the United States last month "I didn't like New York. I was alone, and couldn't speak the language," he said in French. His trans-Atlantic visits now are to Miami and the gym of Angelo Dundee, the manager and handler of Muhammad "Anyway," Bouttier said, "it is easier to understand the accent in Florida than in New York. And everyone is on vacation there. Boxing in the States is different than in Europe, where it is more classic, a direct left (a jab) always followed by a right," Bouttier continued "In the United States, it is more a right," Bouitier continued. "In the United States, it is more on instinct. You drop your gloves, you box with your hands by your side. It is there that I learned, my profession, the precision of punch, the force of punch," (It is also there where Bouitier permanently gave up the continental breakfast—croissants et café au lait—for bacon and eggs.)

Bouttier has lost once since discovering America, a decision in the Angeles to Louvie Harris, whom he knowled out to in Los Angeles to Lonnie Harris, whom he knocked out in the fifth round in Paris a year later. His overall record is 56 victories—39 within the distance—three losses, and one draw. His knockouts have been scored by slinging overhand rights—a punch which the sturdy-chinned Monzon is usually open for-or by short left hooks, another punch which the champion is easily hit with. Bouttier is also a constant jabber, and is fast enough on his feet to run in the woods in the morning with Michel Jazy, the former 1,500-meter record-holder.

Sales Appeal

His string of successes he has 12 straight his sales appeal, a hig payday for Monzon reportedly between $100,000 and $150,000 have given the Frenchman a chance at the title. Some boxing pundits, including former champion Nino Benvenuti, think that Bouttier is accepting the chance pre-maturely. Monzon, 29, from Argentina, won the title from Benvenuti in November, 1970, in Rome and then destroyed the aging Italian last year in Monte Carlo. Monzon is durable, and extremely strong, and according to the French press, "a mean man in the ring." Bouttler says he is not atraid of Mongon. He says that his fear wears off as soon as he leaves the dressing room, and sees his toe opposite him in the ring.

Anyway, Bouttier said, "Some people don't know when they have the chance. But it won't be a catestrophe if.

Honored Dimly

By Russell Baker

degrees which are given away on campuses all over the country each year at this season are something like the queen's honors list in England, in that they constitute a sort of official certification of the recipient's fame, wealth or

There is not much you can do with them, unless you are the kind of person who decorates walls with framed documents. A very pretty scholarly garment, called a "hood,"

Baker comes with the degree. It is lined in silk with the colors of the donor school and has a lot of gaudy velvet, the colors of which vary according to the kind of degrees you get. White for ooctor of humane letters, maroon for doctor of laws, etc.

The trouble is that there isn't much you can do with this, either. They slip it over your head while conferring the degree and you then wear it trailing behind you in the procession until you are out of sight of the graduating class, when you take it off. Of course, there is no regulation saying that you have to take it off. You can leave it on while you drive on across the state to the next commencement. There really isn't much fun in having an honorary degree, once the ceremony is over. That's where a royal honors list has honorary degrees beaten hands down. People who make the honors list are thereafter called "your lordship" or "sir" or "dame" or they are allowed to append "O.B.E." or " M.G.M." or similar alphabet matter behind their names.

In America you can't go about calling yourself "Smith, LLD, Hervard" without attracting derogatory comment. The result is that practically nobody, including most of your closest friends, is aware of your honorary degree. Moreover, it is very difficult to get the news across to them without seeming immodest.

The conversational gambit. "when I was at Princeton last low their leads. Hey, world, June to receive my honorary de- look! LLD from Oaksapp U.! We gree, I saw a desperately ailing are somebody!

NEW YORK.—The honorary magnoliz tree," is pretty forced, as are most of its variations.
So is wearing your hood to cocktail parties. There is a certain satisfaction, admittedly, in being able to ask a woman to your apartment to see υp your hood.

Once the degrees went entirely to men like Herbert Hoover. In tact, for a long time they all seemed to go to Rerbert Hoover. At his death, Hoover held 80 or more, a mark unequaled before or since. Recently, democratiza-tion set in. Actors, poets, musicians, even scholars get them now, along with heavy politicians, gold mine owners and others who throw around laboratories and fieldhouses like million-dollar

Despite the new democracy, there are still exclusions. Sports people, for some reason, seem never to get them. Airline pilots, photographers and men's fashion designers are also quixotically ignored. Great feminists get them with appropriate citations for their labors in the advancement of their sex, but housewives, no matter how great their performence, how arduous their toil, how critical their contribution to the survival of the nation, are never honored with hood end

Frank Sinatra-and who has worked at his profession with more dedication to excellence over a longer period than Sinatra?-is typical of another ignored group. Controversial people. If there is one valid criticism to be made of honorary degrees, it is that they too rarely go to controversial people until after their controversial mess has faded.

Next June the colleges should concentrate on repairing this weakness. Let there be honorary degrees for Sinatra for making life better for so many for so long. For Howard Cosell for breething life into the graveyard of sports broadcasting. For Leo Durocher for having the courage to be an unnice guy, and for dozens more like them.

A group like this might even have the gall to go around wearing their hoods in public, giving the rest of us the courage to fol-

Those 'Picturesque' Clochards of Paris

By Irving Marder

PARIS (IHT).—He came lurching down a side street on the He Saint Louis and stopped. We looked et each other speculatively. Though it was one of the first really warm days of Juoe, like most clochards (tramps). he was wearing several layers clothing: overcoat, heavy sweater, wool shirt. None of the guide-books I've read have given any indication of what it's like to live in Paris on nothing a day. But Pierre Henri David, 53, has been doing it for almost half of his life, and was quite willing to talk about it over a glass of Beaujolais:

He was less than sober, but coherent enough. As we walked to a nearby café he kept saying. "It's incredible." It was epparent that he wasn't referring merely to the offer of a drink. At the café his story emerged in bits and pieces. Sometimes, as nis speech thickened, it was difficult to follow, but the broad outline was clear.

After probing for a while inside his clothing, he took out a thick wad of papers-documents, ettestations, letters, photostats. He is an alumnus of Buchenwald. While serving with the Resistance in his home town of Clermont-Ferrand, he was arrested by the Gestapo, taken to Lyons and tortured there—he displayed an old notebook in which the name of Klaus Barbie was listed and then sent to the concentration camp.

He spent about eight months Buchenwald, from August, 1944, until his liberation early in April, 1945. (After his arrest his parents, he said, were seized by the Gestapo and eventually executed.) He spoke matter-of-factly, showing little emotion until I asked him if he had recelved any compensation from the French government. Nothing, he said-"Not a sou!"

Before the war he had been well-educated—he had passed the first stage of progress toward a degree. He hed also worked in the hotel end restaurant trades. He emerged from Buchenwald penniless and tubercular-he produced a sbeaf of hospital documents. It was then that he begen the long period of decline that brought him to the quars of the He Saint Louis. Hs explained that technically he was not e vagrant-from an overcoat pocket he took two sets of cheap pens and pencils in battered plastic cases, which were

-it was about 5 p.m.-he said "not today." How long since he'd had a full meal? He thought for a while and said finally that he ate "now and then" et a Left Bank restaurant owned by a friend-he showed me en ornate card. :

Where does he sleep—on the quays? Not at all, he said with dignity: "In cars and trucks." How about the police aren't they a problem? They don't bother him, he said once they have seen his papers, which in-clude a statement of official gratitude for his wartime services, and an attestation of his liberation from Buchenwald.

What about medical treatment. of which he was obviously still in need? Even though he had no money, surely there were free clinics? He waved this away with a derisive smile. "You go here, and they say. 'Go there.' You go there and they send you somewhere else..." Had he no friends or relatives who might be helpful? He shook his head, His wife died several years ago, and there were no children. There was no bittlerness in his manner, except when he spoke of the government's epparent lack of interest in him, and he did : esque.

not seem dispirited. He lives "from day to day," he said, adding the information that he is "au .anarchist."

How does he spend his time? Wandering around the island, permitting someone to buy him an occasional glass of wine, reading-Figaro and the other Dapers."

He was slient for a few moments and then said: "I keep myself clean and in pretty good shape, except for these"-pointing to a pattered pair of suede shoes. It was true: He hadn't shaved for a few days, but otherwise was somewhat less scruffy than most clochards. He might be skidding, but he hadn't quite let go.

He finished his drink, accepted a small donation, and went off down the street, wobbling just a
